About the Genealogical Society of Ireland

The Society was established in 1990 to promote the study of genealogy and related subjects as educational leisure pursuits available to all in the community irrespective of age, prior-learning, background or socio-economic circumstances. The Society promotes an interest in genealogy in Ireland by organising Open Meetings, lectures, workshops, publishing genealogical material and exhibiting at major relevant events in the Country.

The society's archive is usually open on Wednesdays and Saturday afternoons. Check the website for other opening hours. www.familyhistory.ie. See map below for location

What the Society can do for you

- Monthly newsletter – the “Gazette”
